

ED&F unveils new interactive web site

The state's leader in economic development information and opportunities recently unveiled its redesigned and highly interactive web site. www.growingnd.com positions the Department of Economic Development & Finance (ED&F) as the first stop for anyone seeking information about North Dakota for business expansion, relocation or startup.

For example, the "Company Profiles" section lets users search for information on primary sector businesses across the state based on city, SIC/NAICS codes, product profile or key words. Another feature is "ED&F Services." Here, users can peruse a list of ED&F-funded projects and review summaries of each.

Yet another benefit is the "Business Toolkit" section where a user can view or download a variety of forms and applications for businesses.

By year-end, the American Community Network database for North Dakota will be added so individuals can use more than 600 data elements for all 53 counties and the state's three metropolitan areas: Grand Forks, Fargo and Bismarck.
